At our May Meeting

“Hand Painted Velvet Devore Scarves & Shawls”

Sherit Levin talked and displayed her beautiful hand painted velvet scarves and shawls. Sherit majored in illustration at RISD and spent most of her time painting. She fell in love with silk painting. She then learned to paint on silk velvet and eventually how to burnout velvet herself. Sherit now has a studio practice from her home, which has allowed her to be with her kids more. Sherit has exhibited and sold her scarves at national shows such as Craft Boston and The American Craft Council in Baltimore, in galleries and boutiques as well as an online shop on Etsy.

Sew and Tell

Naomi Lipsky didn't want to waste the left over fabric, so she made a matching a doll dress.

Sheila Vargas embellished a store bought Jean Jacket.

Donna Boucher made this blouse and cami in her Master Seamstress I class.

Judy Callaghan made these for her Grandson Cole. She is hoping he will be a Red Sox fan.

Catherine Stevens was inspired to make a bag from fabric from her stash.

Mary Jo Hines impressed us with her Wow jacket and her “bags” that can be hung from walkers.

Rose O'Koren made this dress from Vogue 9022.
